Gabriel Tarde – on Monads and Forms of Value – the Cotyledon Capital

By Gabriel Tarde

I. Forms of Cotyledon Capital

One section is software, computers and aesthetics of creativity, another section is books, libraries, and even television, a third section is people, socializing, and even creative interpretations of philosophy. This then becomes departments of universities.

II. Many Values in a Shop and Dreamy Browsing

Many values exist – one is the people’s value, another is the shop’s value and a third is its commercial culture value.

III. Forms of Values in a Monad

So in a monad, which I call a monad like a shop – many values exist – some accounted for and some not – some economically calculated some not.

IV. Sleepwalking therefore through Society

Now imagine you read this work by Tarde – would you care about economics so much – actually I understand there are many values – some accounted for some not – for instance the value of sensing this glass is not valued – I call this living values – just the value of a bank, my house, a car and an office – that it remains is materialist – like architecture therefore is all that matters.

Architecture is happiness.
